BOOK PROJECT

I am currently working on a book. Its working title is Individuation: The Arts, Free Speech, and Experiments in Living. This work will examine the position of the arts in free speech. I will argue that we need to appeal to a relatively neglected ideal from the liberal tradition – namely, the ideal of 'experiments in living' – in order to account for the central position that the arts have occupied in the law and politics of free speech. I am happy to provide a copy of the book proposal on request.

RESEARCH SUPERVISION / EXAMINATION

I have been the primary supervisor for three PhD students at Monash and UCL.

I have been the primary supervisor for six students completing a two-year research-based masters thesis, in the UCL MPhil program (30,000 words), and in the Monash MA Program (40,000 words).

I have supervised 26 students on single-year research projects (10,000 words), in the UCL MA in Philosophy, the UCL Philosophy Undergraduate Dissertation Module, and the Monash Honours Philosophy program. I have supervised on a wide range of topics at this level, in ethics, political philosophy, social theory, feminist philosophy, philosophy of religion, epistemology, and philosophy of language.

I have assessed three PhD dissertations, each of them involving a viva voce examination.
